Being Married to a Gemini

by: Michael C. Waters

I have never really gotten into Astrology or Zodiac signs, but I have done a little extra research for this article and wanted to share with you what I found out. My wife, Robin and my daughter, Lauren are both Gemini's, and since it is May, let's celebrate the intricacies of their sign.

The information I found says that a Gemini is an energetic, charismatic, communicative, witty individual, with a child-like fascination with the world and with new experiences. Robin and Lauren both love to travel. Robin and I went to New York recently, and she never felt intimidated. She seems to feel very at home, no matter where she is (except for when the bum nearly attacked us on the subway!) She is always on the run. I have never seen anyone with as much energy as they have. It seems as if I need a nap on the weekends just to be able to keep up with them!

My research led me to learn this fact too: The Gemini has more than one personality, which can change in a flash, and those near to them would do well to learn them both. On and off, up and down, back and forth, black and white, day and night, yin and yang - this is the essence of the Gemini personality. To this, I say "AMEN"!!! Both of their moods can turn dime.

Just when you think you are safe, then the flip occurs and you find yourself in deep trouble!!! I am amazed how quickly Lauren has picked up on this too. I get the feeling that she is a lot older than twelve!!! I have learned to adapt to these mood shifts (mostly by escaping to another room in the house, or outside to do yard work or anywhere else to keep me out of trouble!!!) I do have to say, that both of them are pretty even keeled most of the time . . . and again, I stress "most of the time"!

One more thing: Gemini in any relationship is smart, witty, fast, and fun. They are the life of the party and have a lot of acquaintances. They seek out others who are smart and adventuresome, and will become quickly bored with those who are homebodies or content with the status quo. Yet another true fact! I am a homebody. There are weekends that I would love to lock the doors, and stay home until I am forced to go back to work on Monday, especially in the winter months. This is not the case for Robin, however. She literally goes stir crazy if she is at home for more than 12 hours consecutively.

Lastly, my research provided this final statement: With a Gemini, learn to expect anything! No words could ever be more true!!!
